To whom it may concern:

I am writing to express my views on the Microsoft antitrust case. If you are pursuing this case in the consumers best interest, please stop! The wonderful economist, Ludwig von Mises, wrote that the greatest democracy ever invented is the free market system. Everyone is constantly voting, with every dollar they spend, for what they want and what they can do without. Consumers have full power and authority to deal with supposed evil monopolists like Bill Gates. They do this by either freely spending their dollars on his products, or deciding to do without (even boycott) Microsoft products. The most appropriate use of the US Dept. of Justices' time would be to fight terrorism and leave the American consumers to deal with legitimate businessmen in the most effective way possible; the free market system.

Sincerely,

Mike McCurdy
